1. Field of the Invention This invention relates to novel copolymers of an ethylene-vinyl acetate terpolymer, which is the copolymer of a terpolymer comprising ethylene-vinyl acetate, ethylene and a polar monomer, said copolymer being useful as a molding material and a coating material, as well as a process for the production of the same.

2. Description of the Prior Art It is well known that ethylene homopolymers such as ethylene homopolymers and ethylene-propylene copolymers are not only effective as molding materials but also excellent in transparency, weather resistance and flexibility. On the other hand, because of moldability of the ethylene-vinyl acetate (EVA) copolymer, the copolymer is used as a coating or molding material. Further, because of transparency, weather resistance and flexibility of the ethylene-vinyl acetate copolymer, the ethylene-vinyl acetate copolymer is used not only as a coating material but also as a molding material.

However, the conventional ethylene-vinyl acetate copolymers used as a molding material and coating material exhibit only inadequate properties with respect to moldability, particularly mold release properties and mold shrinkage resistance, as well as coating film appearance, weather resistance and flexibility. The present inventors previously proposed a method which comprises copolymerizing ethylene, ethylene-propylene, an acrylic ester of a polyol having one or more hydroxyl groups and a polar monomer in the presence of an organosilicon compound and found that ethylene-ethylenically unsaturated monomer copolymers obtained by the method have excellent moldability, particularly mold release properties and mold shrinkage resistance as well as high film appearance, weather resistance and flexibility (Japanese Patent Application No. 109338/1975, which corresponds to U.S. Pat. No. 4,008,227). However, it was found that when the ethylene-vinyl acetate copolymer obtained by the method is used as a coating material and molded, the mold release properties and mold shrinkage resistance are much lower than that of a resin having lower ethylene content, and the resultant molded articles have rather poor appearance and weather resistance. Further, it was found that the ethylene-vinyl acetate copolymers obtained by the method are not necessarily good in processability and toughness as such.

Invention This invention generally relates to internal combustion engines and, more particularly, to a precombustion chamber and method for operating an internal combustion engine. 2. Description of the Related Art A conventional internal combustion engine includes a chamber or chamber structure of a defined volume having a prechamber, generally defined by a frontal surface of the piston and a surface of the cylinder head, facing said piston, separated from said chamber by a plurality of ports in said cylinder head. Conventionally, a main combustion chamber includes two separated regions or volumes of its cavity having separate prechambers and main combustion chambers, each prechamber communicating with corresponding one of the main combustion chambers via a respective gas passage. In particular, if an engine is such as for an outboard motor, a chamber of the defined volume is provided with cooling fins disposed in the vicinity of its jacket and a portion of the chamber located in the vicinity of the cylinder head may also be considered the main combustion chamber. In such an embodiment, only one prechamber may be provided, since the two volumes or regions provided for the main combustion chamber may be
